LONDON, MARCH 1.

All the genuine particulars relative to the death of the late LORD CHANCELLOR.

VARIOUS have been the reports relative to the death of the late Chancellor. Some will have it that he poisoned himself, others that he shot himself, others again, that he broke his heart and died with vexation: But the following is the truth of the case, which the public may rely on.

The Premier had for some been importuning him to accept the seals, which he, fired with the principles of his noble family, [illegible], with a spirit becoming a truly great man often disdainfully refused. But as no one was thought more adequate to the purposes of ministerial intrigues, no stone was left unturned to bring him over. What could not be brought to bear with him, was effected through his wife; the Premier applied to her, she the true sister of arbitrary measures, swelled with the thought of being the lady of almost the first subject in the kingdom, and anxious to have a peerage for her own son, as well as her son-in-law, for that was to be the price of his accepting them, took him in the soft hour of dalliance, the mollia tempora fandi, and turned him to her purpose. She went immediately to the Duke of Grafton, made him acquainted with it, and told him she was convinced if his Majesty would send for him, and ask it as a favour, he would no longer withstand. The thing was done, and he was sent for and closetted; the favour was asked, and the seals accepted. On his return, he called on his friend the Marquis of Rockingham with whom he found Mr. Burke, and one or two of his old associates, who seemed pleased with the unexpected visit, but when he said, "I have accepted the seals," it struck them all of a heap. They could not believe what they heard, but when they found it was too true, his friend, the Marquis, could hold no longer, and instantly addressed him thus; "Mr. Yorke, for I still hope to call you so, I once looked upon "you as an honest man, inflexible to any mean thing, and as one "who had no ambition but that of being instrumental to the "good of society. Now I despise you. As Mr. Yorke, I was "always happy to see you; as Chancellor never put your feet "within my doors again." This spirited address was echoed by the whole company, and the Chancellor retired in disgrace. The Marquis immediately flew to Lord Hardwicke, the Chancellor's brother, told him the story, and urged him to go and insist on his immediate resignation, (for Mr. Yorke had great expectation from his brother;) Lord Hardwicke lost no time, but went to his house, and began with, "brother, what's this I hear? they tell "me you have accepted the seals?—I have. Have? and are you "not ashamed to own it? you have turned your back on those "friends that have been the making of our family. What could "induce you! honour? a place refused is more honourable than "one accepted. Peerage? you wanted none; mine will fall "into your family. And as to money you have enough; if not, "you should have shared with me." Mr. Yorke in his defence urged his Majesty's great importunity, Lord Hardwicke interrupted him with "I'll have no replies—I come not to argue with "the Chancellor but lay my injunctions on my brother. If you "have any future expectations from either me or mine, go "instantly resign." Mr. Yorke would fain have been excused, alledging he knew not what plea to make. If you have no plea of your own, continued he, "go tell the King your friends will "not let you keep them." In short he hurried him away, saying, he would wait his return. The Chancellor went, talking the matter over with his Majesty, but could not bring himself to give them up. On his entering his house again, Lord Hardwicke eagerly called out: "Tell me, may I embrace you as my "brother?" "I hope so," replied Mr. Yorke, "but the King "would not accept my resignation." Then said Lord Hardwicke leaving him, "adieu for ever thou meanest of men. I was once "your sincerest friend, for the future consider me as your "greatest enemy."

Loaded with reproach and shame, the upbraiding of his friends, and the aggravation of his wife, with whom he was heard on Friday, in loud altercation, he could support himself no longer, but flung out of the room where they were together, with a cast of wildness in his eyes, and ran immediately up stairs; his lady suspecting something that might not be right, instantly followed him, and was in his chamber almost as soon as he, but not time enough to prevent his cutting his throat, with a knife he took out of his pocket as he was going up; he made an attempt also at cutting his wrist, but was not able to effect it, thro' her interposition. As soon as she saw him bleeding she rang the bell, and ordered her servant to fetch the first surgeon he could find: Mr. Longley of Gloucester-street, was brought, and he sewed up the wound, which at that time, did not appear mortal. But so determined was he on his own death, that some time after, he threw back his head and burst the stitches, which were again repaired. It was not long before several of the faculty were called in; he then seemed to have some little remorse for what he had done, and asked whether they thought he was out of danger; they replied, if he kept himself quiet, and did not cough; however he could not avoid coughing, hurt himself some how or other, inwardly, and on Saturday evening died, in the greatest agonies imaginable.

VIVANT LEX ET REGINA.

LONDON, MARCH 30.

YESTERDAY his Majeſty went to the Houſe of Peers, attended by his Grace the Duke of Ancaſter, and Lord Robert Bertie, and gave the royal aſſent to forty-three bills; among which were the following, viz.

The bill for raiſing 1,800,000 l. by loans on Exchequer bills, for the ſervice of the preſent year.

The bill for allowing the exportation of malt for a limited time.

It is ſaid, that all the petitions about contested elections are now ſettled, and the remainder of the ſeſſion will be devoted to public buſineſs.

A motion was made in the lower room of the Robinhood ſociety, that as there was plenty of corn in the kingdom, and that the corn now in the ground has the appearance of being very plentiful, for allowing the exportation of wheat, when, after a debate, the ſame was rejected by a great majority.

An authentic Copy of the humble ADDRESS, REMONSTRANCE, and PETITION, of the ELECTORS of the City and Liberty of WESTMINSTER, aſſembled in Weſtminſter-Hall, the 28th day of March, 1770.

WE, your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the electors of the city and liberty of Weſtminſter, having already preſented our humble, but ineffectual application to the throne, full believing, by the miſconduct of your Majeſty's miniſters, in conſederacy with many of our repreſentatives, reduced [illegible] upon

By the ſame ſecret and unhappy influence to which all our grievances have been originally owing, the redreſs of thoſe grievances has been now prevented; and the grievances themſelves have been repeatedly confirmed; with this additional circumſtance of aggravation, that while the invaders of our rights remain in the directors of your Majeſty's councils, the defenders of thoſe rights have been diſmiſſed from your Majeſty's ſervice—your Majeſty having been adviſed by your miniſters to remove from his employment, for his votes in parliament, the higheſt officer of the law; becauſe his principles ſuited ill with theirs, and his pure diſtribution of juſtice with their corrupt adminiſtration of it in the Houſe of Commons.

We beg leave, therefore, again to repreſent to your Majeſty, that the Houſe of Commons have ſtruck at the moſt valuable liberties and franchiſes of all the electors of Great-Britain; and by aſſuming to themſelves a right of chuſing, inſtead of receiving a member when choſen, by transferring to the repreſentative what belonged to the conſtituent, they have taken off from the dignity, and, we fear, impaired the authority of parliament itſelf.

We preſume again, therefore, humbly to implore from your Majeſty, the only remedies which are in any way proportioned to the nature of the evil: That you would be graciouſly pleaſed to diſmiſs for ever from your councils, thoſe miniſters who are ill ſuited by their diſpoſitions to preſerve the principles of a free, or by their capacities to direct, the councils, of a great and mighty kingdom.—And that by ſpeedily diſſolving the preſent parliament, your Majeſty will ſhew, by your own example, and by their diſſolution, that the rights of your people are to be inviolable, and that you will never neceſſitate ſo many injured, and and by ſuch treatment, exaſperated ſubjects, to continue to commit the care of their intereſts, to thoſe who have ſacrificed them; and their truſt to thoſe who have betrayed it.

Your ſubjects look up with ſatisfaction to the powers which the conſtitution has veſted in your Majeſty—for it is upon them that they have placed their laſt dependence.—And they truſt that the right of diſſolving parliaments, which has, under former Princes, ſo often anſwered the purpoſes of power, may, under your Majeſty's, prove an happy inſtrument of liberty.

We find ourſelves compelled to urge with the greater importunity, this our humble but earneſt application to the throne, as every day ſeems to produce the confirmation of ſome old, or to threaten the introduction of ſome new injury.—We have the ſtrongeſt reaſons to apprehend, that the uſurpation begun by the Houſe of Commons upon the right of electing, may be extended to the right of petitioning; and that under the pretence of reſtraining the abuſe of this right, it is meant to bring into diſrepute, and to intimidate us from the exerciſe of the right itſelf.

But whatever may be the purpoſes of others, your Majeſty hath, in your anſwer to the city of London, moſt graciouſly declared, "That you are always ready to receive the requeſts, and "to liſten to the complaints of your ſubjects." Your Majeſty condeſcends likewiſe to eſteem it "a duty to ſecure to them the free "enjoyment of thoſe rights which your family was called to de-"fend.". We rely, therefore, upon the royal word, thus given, that our grievances will meet with full redreſs, and our complaints with the moſt favourable interpretation—that your Majeſty will never conſider the arraignment of your miniſters as a diſreſpect to your perſon—a charge confined, by the very terms of it, to this Houſe of Commons, as injurious to parliament at large (the conſtitution of which we admire, and the abuſe of which is the very thing we lament)—or a requeſt for the diſſolution of parliament, which your ſubjects have a right to make, and your Majeſty to grant, as irreconcileable to the principles of the conſtitution.

The gentlemen having delivered the remonſtrance, returned to the King's-Arms tavern, in Bridge-ſtreet, and dined with the reſt of the committee; where many loyal and conſtitutional healths were drank.

One and twenty cannon were fired on the Surry ſide of the Thames, when Sir Robert Bernard took the chair in Weſtminſter-Hall; and again about the time that the remonſtrance was delivered to his Majeſty at St. James's.

Various opinions have been aſſerted as to the number of perſons in the hall; but from the beſt and moſt attentive obſervation, it may be ſafely affirmed, there were at leaſt 5000.

When the electors came oppoſite Earl Temple's in Pall-Mall, they ſaluted his Lordſhip with loud huzzas.

When the gentlemen appointed to carry up the Weſtminſter remonſtrance, came to the palace gate, an extra guard of ſoldiers was immediately turned out; and though there was not the leaſt diſturbance, nor the appearance of any thing diſorderly, yet the ſoldiers behaved in a moſt inſolent manner, and ſtruck many perſons, without the leaſt provocation, with their bayonets. The gentlemen having alighted from their carriages, amidſt the acclamations of the people, (who offered no other inſult to the ſoldiers, and never attempted to go within twenty yards of the palace gate) walked through the lane of ſoldiers, and went up ſtairs to the levee room door, where they were met by one of the grooms of the bed-chamber; who aſked Sir Robert Bernard if he had any thing to preſent to his Majeſty? To which Sir Robert replyed, "Yes, the addreſs, remonſtance, and petition of the city of Weſtminſter." Upon which the groom of the bed-chamber ſaid, he would go and acquaint the Lord in waiting. He accordingly went, but not returning ſoon, Sir Robert Bernard propoſed to go into the levee room, which he did accordingly. On opening the door, the ſame groom of the bed-chamber ſaid he could not find the Lord in waiting, but ſhould ſoon; However, the gentlemen went on, and, after ſome time, the Lord in waiting came to them; and ſaid, if they had any thing to deliver to his Majeſty, he would receive it in the next room, whither they accordingly went; and, after ſome time, his Majeſty coming into the room, Sir Robert preſented the remonſtrance open. His Majeſty did not look at it, but turned his back upon the gentlemen, and delivered it to the Lord in waiting, who delivered it to another, who handed it to a groom of the bed-chamber, and he carried it off.

This day at noon a great number of the freeholders of the county of Middleſex, attended at the Mile-end aſſembly-room, to conſider of a remonſtrance to his Majeſty; when the Rev. Dr. Wilſon was unanimouſly voted to the chair. The Rev. Mr. Horne began a recapitulation of grievances for many years back, down to the preſent time; he then took occaſion to mention the fate of their, and other petitions to the throne, and produced a remonſtrance. He ſpoke an hour and a half, and was ſeconded by Mr. Adair, junior. The remonſtrance was unanimouſly agreed to, but the time of preſenting it was left to the ſheriffs, as Mr. Sawbridge only was there, Mr. Townſend being abſent on account of the death of his father.

In the courſe of Mr. Horne's ſpeech, he took occaſion to mention the account he had ſoon to ſettle with Mr. Onſlow, in ſo very jocular a manner, that it ſet the company in a burſt of laughter, that laſted five minutes.

Wedneſday Edward Thurloe, Eſq; kiſſed hands, on being appointed his Majeſty's Solicitor-General, in the room of Mr. Dunning.

We are informed, that in order that no obſtruction ſhall remain againſt Mr. Wilkes's enlargement on the 18th of April next, the bill of rights gentlemen will diſcharge the remaining part of his debts, and Mr. Wilkes is to enter into obligations to repay them after ſuch a limited time.

We hear a vacancy is ſhortly expected by an expulſion of a very extraordinary nature.

Should the above take place, it is ſaid the preſent worthy gentleman will not put up again till the Augean ſtable be thoroughly cleanſed.

[illegible] declared it as his opinion, ſtrongly recommended American affairs to be taken into immediate conſideration.

A gentleman, a few days ago, reading the paragraph relative to the declenſion of the Minority with an exulting accent, in a certain coffee-room, one of his auditors obſerved, that it was undoubtedly a circumſtance of great triumph, eſpecially if he would take the trouble to recollect, that many country ſeats were now occupied by their owners, from a juſt indignation at the proceedings of a houſe, where they could not conceive any one member, under the preſent predicament of affairs, had a legal voice.

It is reported, that an intermarriage is now in agitation amongſt ſome of the firſt families of oppoſite intereſts, which it is expected will abundantly tend to conciliate public meaſures, and public tranquility.

Letters arrived from the continent, within theſe few days, declare, that Lord Holland was at Nice in Italy, in perfect health and good ſpirits.

We can from undoubted authority aſſure the public, that the letter ſigned DARTMOUTH [See Wells's General Gazette of Wedneſday laſt] and ſaid to be a genuine copy of a letter ſent to the Lord-Mayor, is ſpurious: The ſaid noble Lord not having ſent any letter on that occaſion. [Daily Gazetteer.]

CHARLES-TOWN, MAY 24.

GREAT-BRITAIN loſes this Year, by the Reſolutions of this Province alone, not to purchaſe Slaves, or Britiſh Goods generally, till America is relieved from the Burthens it has complained of, no leſs a Sum than £.300,000 Sterling, at a very moderate Computation——bleſſed Conſequence of attempting to raiſe about £.13,000 per Annum in an unconſtitutional Way, from all the Colonies, to maintain a Set of Men who can only create Confuſion and Diſtreſs.

LOAF SUGAR refined in this Town, is now ſold ſo low, as 2 Four Shillings and Six Pence the Pound—and though by the firſt Reſolution of this Province, we engaged to encourage and promote the Uſe of North-American Manufactures in general, we at the ſame Time engaged, to give a Preference to theſe of this Country in PARTICULAR: Some Attention to this Article, will keep a great deal of Specie in the Province—as would travelling to the Back Country, for Health, inſtead of making Voyages to Sea

Re publiſhed by particular Deſire.

☞ If it is poſſible, that any Planter in this Province can be ſo deſtitute of public Virtue, as to countenance the unfeeling Merchants of Georgia (while they counter-act our Reſolutions, and remain dead to every Thing but their own Intereſt) by purchaſing SLAVES in THAT Province, and introducing them over Land into THIS; he will do well to conſider, that EVERY SLAVE ſo introduced, is liable to Seizure and Forfeiture, ONE HALF TO THE INFORMER; that he will be ſo narrowly watched even by his Brethren, as well as Overſeers and others, that it will be almoſt impoſſible to ſecure one ſuch Slave; and that there is a Reſolution taken, to inflict the higheſt public Cenſure upon ſuch Offenders particularly, and to treat them with a Contempt equal to the Atrociouſneſs of the Offence—as Enemies to the Liberties of America."

The Statue of the Right Hon. WILLIAM PITT, Eſquire is to be landed To-morrow Morning, 8 o'Clock, on Mr Charles Elliott's Wharf, where it will be received by the Inhabitants, and from thence immediately drawn by themſelves to the Arſenal, near the Place where it is intended to be erected.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, is expected to return from his Journey into the Back Settlements, on Tueſday next.

The 10th Inſtant His Excellency Governor Wright was pleaſed to prorogue the General Aſſembly of Georgia, to the 13th Day of Auguſt next.

Laſt Tueſday Night died, univerſally regretted, as ſhe lived beloved, Mrs. Helena Laurens, the Wife of Henry Laurens, Eſq; an valuable a Woman in all Reſpects, as any ſhe has left behind.

On Friday laſt, Thomas Evance, Eſq; Mr. Nathaniel Stone, Mrs. Grant, and Mrs. Roberts, embarked for England, in the Ship Mermaid, Capt. Samuel Ball, which ſailed the ſame Day.

Laſt Tueſday arrived here Capt. Silſbee, in nine Days from Salem, and informs us, that the Merchants of that Town who had imported Goods in the laſt Ships from London to Boſton had, after a Town-Meeting, re-ſhipped all the ſaid Goods, to be re-conveyed to London the way they were brought.

On the 10th Inſtant, Mr. Robert Roſe of St. Andrew Pariſh was married to Miſs Rebecca Rivers, Daughter of the late Mr. John Rivers.

Laſt Sunday Mr. Thomas Roſe of St. Andrew's Pariſh, was married to Miſs Mary-Ann Clark Saunders, Daughter of the late Joſhua Saunders, Eſq; of St. Bartholomew's Pariſh.

The 13th Inſtant Capt. Edward Darrell was married to Miſs Ann Smith, Daughter of the Reverend Joſiah Smith.

CHARLES-TOWN, MAY 24, 1770.

I JOHN HOPE, of St. Mark's Pariſh, in South-Carolina, do hereby give public Notice, to whom it may concern,

That JAMES ALLEN of Wando Neck, in Chriſt-Church Pariſh and the Province aforeſaid, deceaſed, did, in the Year of our Lord 1748, for a valuable Conſideration to him in Hand paid, bargain and ſell, unto SUSANNA CURRANT, her Heirs and Aſſigns for ever, all and ſingular his Eſtate, both real and perſonal; reſerving to himſelf only the Uſe thereof, during his natural Life: But, ſince the Death of the ſaid Suſanna Currant, contrary to all Law and Juſtice, hath ſeaſed, willed and deviſed away a great Part of the ſaid Eſtate, to the great Prejudice and Damage of me, the aforeſaid John Hope; who am Brother and Heir at Law to the aforeſaid Suſanna Currant. And as the juſt Right and Property of the aforeſaid Eſtate, is now undeniably in me the aforeſaid John Hope: Therefore any and every Perſon, who hath any Concern in the ſaid Eſtate, and will let me know in a few Days where I ſhall meet them, may depend on ſettling the Same in the moſt favourable Manner to themſelves, or having it left to the Reference of any worthy Gentlemen, whoſe Characters are unſpotted: But if any ſhould diſregard or refuſe this my ſo reaſonable Requeſt; I do hereby require and demand, that they do forthwith ſurrender and give up my juſt Property, on Pain of being proceeded againſt according to Law, which they may depend upon.

If any deſire to ſee my Right to the aforeſaid Eſtate, and the plain undeniable Points of Law which ſupport me in the ſame, they may be fully ſatisfied, without Fee or Reward, by calling at Mr. Samuel Hopkins in Charles-Town, or

Their humble Servant,

JOHN HOPE.

N. B. Within theſe few Days I have been ſatisfied, by a Will and Deed made by Mrs. Frances Smith, that the Land whereon the white Meeting ſtands, was given for the Uſe thereof.
